

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method for controlling a remote client computer. The method for performing a remote control of a client computer, which is applied to a remote control system, includes the steps of: a) at a remote control server, providing a remote control program to the client computer; b) at the remote control server, allowing the client computer to connect to the remote server based on a user identification and a password of the client computer received from the client computer; and c) at the remote control server, performing the remote control of the client computer after discussing contents of the remote control through a chatting unit.

100912350.072604